Four days later Mr. Nixon ordered a resumption of fullscale bombing of the North, sus-pended since 1968, and the mining of its ports to stop weapons from reaching Hanoi by sea and, if possible, by rail and truck.

He also softened terms for a complete U.S. withdrawal from South Vietnam saying a pullout would be completed within four months of an Indochina ceasefire and the release of Americans held prisoner by North Vietnam. gan their attack yesterday, heavy contact with the North Vietnamese was reported. In four actions, 79 enemy soldiers were reported to have been killed. The South Vietnamese acknowledged having lost two killed. South Vietnamese authorities here and in Hue have shown unusual reluctance to disclose details of the fighting in Quang Tri. They decline to state how far their forces have advanced into the province from the south or how close they are to the province capital.

Most of the fighting so far has beer in a zone about three miles south of the town of Hailang, where both marine and airborne units are engaged. This region is about a mile north of the My Chanh River line, the main defense line for the city of Hué where the tactical situation has remained stable for weeks.

Strong Defenses The South Vietnamese said they had destroyed an amphibious North Vietnamese PT-76 tank and killed many enemy troops. Nevertheless, it is apparent that enemy defenses are strong, since northward progress of government forces has been negligible.

The helicopter landing area today is about 10 miles north of the Hailang fighting, where the coast is bounded by uninhabited marshy beaches that extend about three miles inland from the sea. At the edge of the beach, chisters of hamlets extend inland all the way to Quang Tri city.

Deep Division

The ambiguity of the ruling was in the deep division among the five-man majority. Justices William J. Brennan jr., Thurgood Marshall and William O. Douglas held that the death penalty was "cruel and unusual" punishment and, therefore, probfbited by the Eighth Amendment, while Justices Byron R. White and Potter Stew-art based their opinions more on the haphazard manner in which the death penalty is imposed rather than on the nature of the death penalty itself. They found that the lack of specific criteria to determine whener a person is or is not sentenced to death violates the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment. Justice Stewart wrote, "These

The outcome was largely influenced by Mr. Schiller's threat to resign if elaborate exchange controls were erected. With elections scheduled for later this year and with voters' complaints emphasizing the rising prices and the economic slowdown since last year's revaluation of the deutsche mark, Chancellor Willy Brandt wants to keep the key ministry in strong hands.

India, Pakistan Summit Talks Held Up by Snag Over Agenda

By Robert Trumbull

-President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, of Pakistan, and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, of India, remained aloof from substantive talks in their "summit" conference for the second day today, while subordinates struggled with details of the discussion's program.

High-level foreign affairs offi-cials of the estranged neighbor countries have been unable to agree on the order and interrelationship of the sensitive topics to be discussed in the current effort to iron out numerous disputes and fix the basis for a durable peace between Islamabad and New Delhi, reports from the conference indicated.

A principal snag in the talks has been the conflict between Mrs. Gandhi's desire for a package deal on the differences betweeen the two countries and Mr. Bhutto's expressed preference for a "step by step" approach to solu-tion, an informed official said.

The most nagging issues concern territorial dispute; involving the divided, former princely state of Kashmire and opposed military holdings along India's western border, and the fate of some 93.000 Pakistani prisoners held in India since the two-week war in which Indian forces and Bengali partisans defeated Pakistan last December.

DETROIT, June 29 (AP).-A 28-year-old unemployed man was arrested at his home and charged as the airliner hijacker who got $502,500 ransom and parachuted over Indiana last weekend, the FBI announced today.

Martin J. McNally, of Wyandotte, was charged with viola-tion of the federal air piracy statute, said Neil J. Welsh, special agent in charge of the Michigan FBI, Mr. McNally was arrested shortly before midnight vesterday and was held by the FBI in Detroit pending arraignment today. A hijacker took over the American Airlines Boeing-727 shortly after it left St. Louis last Friday night en route to Tulsa, Okla, with 94 persons on board. He forced a landing at St.

which an airline hijacker demanded ransom and parachutes. Arrests have been made in all except the first, involving a man identified as D.B. Cooper, who bailed out between Seattle and Reno. Nev. It also was the 10th time in the past 18 hijackings that the plane was taken over on Friday night. Psychologists have speculated that loneliness of the ap-

House involvement in the convention will be sharply below previous years. Only 41 members of the House were chosen as delegates, as compared with 85 four years ago.

Senators' Role

The role of Senate Democrats in the convention has been even more drastically curtailed, with only 17 chosen as delegates. In offering the resolution, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D., Ill., warned that the proposed reforms would encourage "activists and militants to take over the party." The new party structure, approved last week by the convention's Rules Committee, would sharply enlarge the role of grassroots Democrats in party affairs, stripping party "regulars" of much of their power. The reforms call for radical al-

Rusk Says Any Negotiation With Hanoi Regime Is Futile

By Bernard Gwertzman

(NYT).—Dean Rusk returned to Capitol Hill yesterday and lectured Congress, as he did when he was secretary of state, on the need for a firm defense posture and the futility of negotiating with the North Vietnamese.

Acknowledging that his views often made him sound like a man "from another age." Mr. Rusk also told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee that the United States should not let the strategic arms limitation agreements produce a sense of euphoria or unilateral concessions to the Russians, since that might tempt them to take reckless steps.

Mr. Rusk, who served under Presidents Lyndon B. Johnson and John F. Kennedy, said the failure to end the Vietnam war was the greatest disappointment of the Johnson administration. He said he doubted if the Nixon administration would have eny better luck in negotiating an end

Noting that American public opinion tends toward disengaging from Southeast Asia, Mr. Rusk wouldn't negotiate. Why should

Mr. Rusk, who now teaches at the University of Georgia, has sought to avoid the limelight since leaving office in 1969 after eight years as secretary of state. Mr. Rusk noted that this was his first appearance before a House committee since retiring from office. He made an appearance before a Senate committee

Today's session was part of the WASHINGTON, June 29 ican "national security policy and the changing world alignment." The subcommittee is headed by Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D., Wis., who was one of Mr. Rusk's strongest supporters while he was secretary of state.

Mr. Rusk acknowledged that his views have not changed much since he left office.

Essentially, he has stressed that the lessons of the 1930s and the post-World War II vears should not be lost. He has interpreted the Vietnam involvement as an effort to stem aggression and prevent a bigger war. If that had been done in the 1930s when Hitler first seized the Ruhr. World War II might have been avoided, Mr. Rusk contended.

Repeating Mistakes "I tell my students today not to correct the mistakes of their fathers by adopting those of their grandiathers," he said, referring to what he described as a trend toward neo-isolationism reminiscent of the 1930s. He said he recalled that when he was a senior in college the Japanese invaded Manchuria, and everyone said, "That's a long WEV Off." He added, "But a few years later I was in uniform in Burma, and that's even further away." Mr. Rusk, who is an adviser on arms-control matters for the Nixon administration, said he would support the strategic erms limitation agreements, but that he is disappointed with the accord on offensive arms, which he said seems to open the way for an arms race in areas not covered. He said he does not sares with those who would not go ahead with arms programs, since

Pentagon Said to Use Rat Of Exchange to Help Saige

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON, June 29 (NYT).—The Defense Department, a staff report of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee disclosed yesterda; devised a two-tier system of monetary exchange rates to pump an additional $155 million into the South Vietnamese economy last

The report suggested that the Defense Department had resorted to such monetary operations, which it contended resulted in a subsidy to the Salgon government, as a way of offsetting congressional reductions in economic aid last year to South Vietnam.

The Defense Department monetary operation, according to the report, worked in the following

As part of an economic stabllization program inaugurated by the Saigon government at the suggestion of the Unied States, the monetary exchange rate for the South Vietnamese piaster was increased in October, 1970, from 118 plasters for a dollar to 275 plasters, and then in November. 1971, to 410 plasters. These revised exchange rates, designed to encourage the flow of dollars into South Vietnam, applied to private transactions, such as those of U.S. servicemen exchanging their pay in "military scrip" dollars for local currency.

Rate Raised in April

The Defense Department, meanwhile, continued to maintain an exchange rate of 118 plasters for a dollar in its official transactions of purchasing South Vietnamese plasters. It was not until April that the exchange rate for these official government-to-government transactions was finally raised to the print where it is now: 425 plasters for a dollar.

The net effect, according to the report, was that South Vietnam had devalued its plaster for private transactions as a way of attracting foreign currencies, while for official transactions with the United States a much lower exchange rate was maintained, thus permitting South Vietnam to get more dollars for the plasters purchased by the Defense Department.

As a result, the report said. Defense Department purchases of piasters provided $271 million in dollars for the South Vietnamese government in 1971. But if the official exchange rate had been increased in keeping with the other rates, the report noted, the Defense Department, in its purchase of plasters, could have bought the same quantity of goods and services for $116 mil-

Buffet, who with his accomplice Roger Bontems, 36, was condemned today, was a killer without remorse. He was sentenced to life in 1970 for the murder of a young woman "for the sensation," as he told the court. He was caught while trying to strangle a 5-year-old girl and later confessed to 44 robbery attacks on women. During his first trial he asked the court for the death sentence, and was refused. This time he was not. Though Bontems stood quivering in the dock when the death sentence was demanded, Buffet smiled and clapped his hands. Yesterday, he stood to tell Henri Le Corno, director of French prisons, that his only regret was that he had not cut Mr. Le Corno's throat in place of the prison nurse.

Thierry Levy, a defense attorney, described Buffet today as a "man who has lost his taste for living and his interest in the outcome of this trial." Mr. Levy a news conference with George S. McGovern the other day that they had amassed 96 3/4 hitherto uncommitted delegate votes to support his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. Sen. Mc-Govern promptly announced that this accretion had swollen his vote toll sufficiently to assure him a first ballot victory at Miami. The black vote tally from this exercise shrank at 4 p.m. that day to 74 3/4, but it may rise again as undoubtedly will the overall McGovern total. Whether, however, the black votes delivered in this maneuver finally come out to be 74 3/4 or 80 or even 96 3/4 or whether this was the exact block of votes that actually put McGovern over the top, the vent and the symbolism are both real and important. Black political power has come of age.

Back in June, 1966, during the heyday of the civil rights movement when Stokely Carmichael first shouted, "Black Power," many whites were frightened and a lot of blacks were puzzled. What did it mean? Who would it hurt? Could it help anyone? At first it looked as if the hostile overtones were destined to be dominant. Blacks began to withdraw in substantial ways from the frail and laboriously built integrated mechanisms which had seemed to many to be the solution to the racial problems in the courts. Then there were the urban rebellions which suddenly stopped with an apparent slow black slide into quiescence and regression. Depression spread through the black community and also touched white civil rights allies.

But underneath it all, a quiet revolution seems to have been taking place. The black withdrawal marked not merely hostility and isolation, but also a time of quiet appraisal of black needs and a rise in the determination of blacks to develop greater self-sufficiency and their own solutions to their own problems. They wanted the nation to heed their needs as they perceived them rather than to continue tagging along picking up whatever happened to fall off the back of the liberal bandwagon. At the same time, a real revolution was taking place in black political participation. The Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965 and by 1967 there were 475 black office holders. By this year, the number had grown to 2,264. Between 1965 and 1972, the number of blacks in Congress had grown from 6 to 14

With numbers sufficient to form a critical mass, black politicians began taking themselves and the political process seriously. They concluded that black votes, delivered in great lumps in recent years to the Demo-

A mimber of black politicians declared at cratic party, hadn't been paid for in real political terms and that the Republican party wasn't even listening. Early in 1971. a growing determination among black politicians to participate in a more significant and more sophisticated way in the 1972 electoral process developed into a series of quiet strategy meetings around the country. The Black Congressional Caucus became one of the most serious segments of black activist

The politicians argued a variety of strategies for 1972 in their meetings and then held a convention in Gary, Ind. There, black people mapped their own demands and later the congressional caucus developed a black bill of rights which was shorter, but substantially similar. Then, as the McGovern train picked up speed on the way to Miami, a number of politicians, notably Delegate Walter Fauntroy, decided it was time for blacks to move and to move decisively. Fauntroy and others began serious political negotiations with the McGovern people, not in the old framework of asking the candidate to say something good about brotherhood, but in the new mold of presenting black-developed demands and then bargaining for political quid pro quos. The Mc-Govern camp wanted the votes and went along with much of the Black Congressional Caucus's bill of rights and other demands. Hard political bargaining ensued which seemed to satisfy everyone, whereupon Fauntroy, Congressmen Louis Stokes and William Clay and others began rounding up some critical votes and then delivered them at a critical time.

But it is clear that it was also serious hard-nosed American politics played with the thumping rhythms of soul, and not some pale imitation of life. And it was clearly the first time blacks had participated in as serious, critical and political a way in a major American political party's decisionmaking process. In addition, no matter how McGovern fares, it did set on track a black mode of participation in the political process in this country which is not likely to be reversed in the near future. Can anyone imagine a future candidate scrounging for the last few votes and not investigating the possibility that one of his black friends in politics could deliver at least some of them

Both for those who remember black people segregated behind a chicken wire fence at the 1928 Democratic National Convention in Kansas City and for those who were troubled in 1966 about what black power might come to mean, the events of this past week must have come as a welcome revelation.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Bombs for Peace?

The United States is a four-time loser in the bombing of North Vietnam's only steel plant. The fifth bombing last weekend again has halted production there, but it is unlikely that it will hamper North Vietnam's war effort any more significantly than did the other four. Nor is there any substantial military purpose to be achieved in the stepped-up aerial attacks this week in the Hanoi-Haiphong area, which undoubtedly are taking a heavy civilian toll.

The Pentagon Papers revealed the futility of bombing so-called strategic targets in underdeveloped North Vietnam. President Nixon and his aides may not have been willing to accept this Johnson administration study. But a secret Nixon administration analysis in 1969 by Henry Kissinger's National Security Council Staff along with seven other government agencies reached a similar conclusion.

This first Kissinger National Security Study Memorandum showed that almost four years of American bombing destroyed $500 to $700 million of capital stock, military facilities and current production in North Vietnam. But aid from other Communist countries during this period totalled $3 billion, four to six times as much. "In terms of total economic and military resources available to support the war, North Vietnam is better off today (1969) than it was in 1965," Defense Secretary Laird's office noted in NSSM-1.

* * * Ald from the Soviet Union, China and other Communist countries averaged only $115 million a year through 1964. But it was stepped up after the bombing began in 1965 and was in the neighborhood of $1 billion a year by 1963. When the bombing was suspended, aid from those countries dropped

There has been no change in the commitment of Moscow and Peking to supply everything Hanoi needs to continue the war. In the 1965-68 period, Communist China better hope of peace. even provided up to 50,000 transport troops to help keep roads and railways in repair between Hanoi and the Chinese border. The return of some of those troops now is hinted in a statement by Radio Hanoi that "new forces" have just joined North Vietnam's "communications and transportation forces."

President Nixon may be counting on the mining of Haiphong and other ports to , increase North Vietnam's import problems, particularly in petroleum. Mr. Nixon has been forewarned since the 1969 NSSM-1 study that the capacity of the overland routes from China alone was two and a half times larger than North Vietnam's combined sea and land import tonnage. The "smart bombs" and virtually unrestricted attacks now under way on this transport network undoubtedly are hampering the flow. But even an unlimited bombing campaign would leave North Vietnam with enough material to carry on, the CIA and Secretary Laird's office informed Mr. Nixon in NSSM-1.

Differences between Moscow and Peking may cause some temporary supply difficulties. But a shift from Russia to China as major supplier is unlikely to reduce the flow of Soviet weapons and ammunition, virtually all of which has been coming overland across China all along. As for petroleum, a new pipeline from China may help to ease North Vietnam's problem, even if sections are bombed out at times.

The only effect of the bombing on the war is that it imposes hardships on the people of North Vietnam. It might damage morale -but never has in the past. It might influence North Vietnam's Politburo, now in the midst of an important policy review, to soften its negotiating position in Paris. But it never did so in the past, despite President Johnson's carefully calculated orchestration of bombing and peace offers.

More bombing is no more likely now to pressure Hanol to accept American terms. De-escalation and a resumption of negotiations for a compromise settlement offer a

Moving Far From the Little Golden Calf

By C. L. Sulzberger

LONDON.—Four years ago, when he was still president of France, Gen. de Gaulle told me: Now the United States does not want to change its policy on gold and it is doing everything possible to continue that policy. It is lending to other banks and trying to conserve as much gold as is possible in its own stocks. The consequence is that the United States has too many dollars which it doesn't want to keep at home.

"It wants to send these abroad, to export them as loans and investments, in order to avoid an excess of dollars at home and consequent inflation. This export of dollars is used to buy up European enterprises while protecting von from inflation. Of course this is inconvenient for Europe....

"In France we have no desire to see the United States embarrassed and we would derive no satisfaction from such an event, The only thing we want is to see a healthy and normal economic equilibrium established there."

Simplification

De Gaulle tended to simplify the remedy for a situation that has now become even more crit-He suggested the price of gold be doubled from $35, which it was at the time of our conversation, to $70 an ounce. Since then there have been two small steps in that direction.

Later in 1968 the central bankers, meeting in Frankfurt, established the two-tier price system for gold, keeping its monetary level at $35 but letting its commercial level (jewelry, etc.) float upward. Then, last year, the monetary parity was hoisted by Washington to $38 an ounce. But these moves were not enough to help the world out of its fundamental slough.

De Gaulle's theory was that by doubling the price of gold the United States would double its assets and halve its debts. In 1962 official U.S. gold reserves totaled $16,950,000,000. Naw they have alid to $10,490,000,000. Europe's reserves have steadily climbed so that it holds about half the world's stock-but it also has some $23 billion in unconvertible U.S. dollars,

The old Gaullist idea that Washington should resign itself to doubling the price of monetary gold—noninonetary gold already approaches that level-remains popular among many Frenchmen. But any appeal this ever might have had in the United States has diminished with melting bullion reserves. Moreover, there just isn't enough gold in the world to finance the immense boom

De Gaulle's thought was really to use gold as a means of forcing the United States to adopt a stable external monetary policy. Gold will probably have to slip upward again but the world must accustom itself more and more to such artificial devices as special drawing rights (SDRs) and cerhaps other substitutes for the yellow metal that is in short supply. The Eurodollar aiready plays an ever-increasing role in international finance, somewhat like that of sterling before 1939. In this confusing situation, the Bank of International Settlements observes in its annual report: The essential role of gold in the system at present is not in its use as a means of settlement but its use as the standard for the parities of currencies, and as the guarantee of value for the SDR itself and for creditor and debtor positions in the International Monetary Fund."

All this relates directly to the current crisis in Europe, represented by Britain's decision to float the pound. But this alone, with its immensely important political ramifications including the Common Market's future, is only symbolically related to gold. The world has moved far from the little golden calf before whose altar it once worshipped.

Cause and Effect

Today's difficulties stem from an explosion in world trade and living standards which require immense quantities of money to years.

finance them. In a sense, the money has to be "invented." The combination of cause and effect has produced a movable inflation that shifts from one to another country. The fear that really obsessed De Gaulle was that sither the United States would export its inflation abroad or, failing that, be consumed by it at home.

The United States has somehow distributed so many billion dollars overseas that the outside world is stuck unless a more disciplined American external monetary policy is devised. This is at the heart of British Prime Minister Heath's problem; also, ultimately, of President Nixon's. Nixon obviously knows this and has been working on it for at least two

Third-World Ecology

By Robert Bendiner

NEW YORK.—Among the rifts that threatened from time to time to swallow up the UN Conference on the Human Environment, none had been so volubly predicted as the split between the rich industrial nations of the West and the under-developed states of the Third World-reportedly eager for their turn to produce and pollute.

Flery representatives, particularly the angry young delegate from Algiers, did seem to enjoy dwelling on the alleged plot of the onetime colonial powers to prevent their erstwhile victimstates from coming to full eco-nomic flower. Yet the conference did not collapse in mutual recrimination—for the reassuring reason that the gulf, real though it is, is not as deep as may be generally supposed.

The gathering produced a document which rejected China's jolting positions on population control ("It is wholly groundless." the Chinese delegate said, "to think that population growth in itself will bring about pollution and damage to the environment") and on the world's resources ("The possibility of man's exploitation and utilization of natural resources is inexhaustible.") But it accepted the very real need of the emerging countries for special help if they were to develop economically without wasting those resources and compounding the world's environmental follies.

dicated that in spite of powerful currents in the underdeveloped world for a vastly improved standard of living there is no serious commitment to achieving it by blindly following the pattern of the great industrial powers. Mexico's preparatory report was particularly revealing on this score, coming as it did from a country of intermediate development, which is now wondering whether its industrial gains were worth their noxious consequences in air and water pollution. The report reflected the attitude of all those semideveloped countries that already feel the harmful ef-fects of industrialization without having attained anything like its full economic benefits.

Iranian officials, whose capital city has exploded to something like 900 percent of its pre-World War II population, displayed a similar awareness, presenting a picture of industry attained at the price of a polluted Caspian Sea, soil contaminated by factory wastes and a large part of the 'nation's forests destroyed. Among the still less-developed countries, Kenya reported its coastal waters polluted by oil, its heavy forests being thinned for large-scale ranching and its fisherles endangered by hydroelectric dams.

Mrs. Gandhi went on to plead that a higher standard of hving for the impoverished people of the earth be achieved without alienating them from their heritage, "without despoiling nature of its beauty, freshness and purity so essential to our lives." And she sought to assure those same people that a regard for ecology would not work against their interests but, on the con-trary, would enrich their lives.

None of this is to deny that the subordination of environment to production, which has marked the whole long course of the Industrial Revolution, has its appeal for the economically emerging countries of the planet. Indonesia, for example, has seemed almost oblivious to the swift denuding of its lush forests for profit—as well as the disappearance of the wildlife that they once sheltered. And Brazil appears to welcome industry with a relative indifference to ecological consequences that suggests the United States of the Gilded

Mrs. Irving Fights Extradition Bid By Switzerland

ali on Lab

NEW YORK, June 29 (Reuters).—A lawyer representing Mrs. Clifford Irving yesterday accused the Swiss government of reneging on an agreement not to prosecute her for her part in the Howard Hughes biography hour perpetrated by her husband.

The lawyer, Maurice Nessen made the accusation at an extradition hearing being pressed by the Swiss government. The Swiss want to try Mrs. Irving on charges arising from her having allegedly deposited and withdrawn the bulk of $650,000 paid by a publishing company to her husband. Magistrate Gerard Goettel said at the end of today's involved legal arguments that he will rule Friday whether the Swiss have presented enough evidence against Mrs. Irving to warrant her extradition.

Mr. Nessen told the court he would show that the Swiss falled to live up to an agreement reached with two U.S. government prosecutors who flew to Switzerland last January.

He also argued that to send Mrs. Irving back to Switzerland would involve her in "double jeopardy." since she is now serving a two-month jail sentence here for her admitted part in the Hughes hoax.

BRUSSELS, June 29 (IHT) .-The premiers and foreign ministers of the three Benelux countries, meeting here yesterday, hardened their view that the question of whether a Common Market, political secretariat should be established in Brussels or Paris ought to be dropped from the agenda of the European summit this fall They consider the issue to be too divisive for the moment and think it should be quietly shelved because it threatens to disrupt preparations for the October France is still intransigent that the secretariat should be in Paris, while its European Economic Community partners feel it would be more suitable to have it in Brussels, Britain, which will join the EEC in January, has made clear it will abandon the secretariat idea altogether rather than see it set up in the French capital. Benelux countries fear that such a body, if it came too heavily under French influenceas it almost certainly would if in Paris-might take a strident anti-American view of world affairs, with which they not wish to be associated.

Most Foreigners Barred East of Volga "direct control" or to visitors

By Murray Seeger

MOSCOW, June 29 .- The Soviet Union, without explanation, has banned all travel by foreign diplomats and correspondents to areas east of the Volga River, it was learned yesterday.

Seasoned diplomats could not recall when such a wide travel ban covering so much Soviet territory-roughly 75 percent of the land area—had been issued before.

Several Explanations Diplomats have offered several explanations for the travel ban, the favored one being the possibility that the Soviet Union has started making major shipments of military supplies to North Vietnam along the trans-Siberian railroad The next most popular theory is that the military is staging major maneuvers along the long border with China. However, since the Soviet-China border has been quiet for many months, it seems unlikely that the Soviet government would stage any massive troop movements that might antagonize its large Communist Ever since President Nixon in troops from Southeast Asia and for a renewal of the Paris peace talks on the basis of proposals made by North Vietnam. The Soviet Union bars foreign travelers from much of its territory at all times, including border districts. Other specific areas are closed on different occasions, BERLIN (IHT).—The Bauhaus, Bauhaus, it had existed only 14 years, but its influence embraced the entire world.

The Bauhaus Archive, founded 11 years ago, has now moved from Darmstadt into handsome and spacious new and presumably permanent quarters in Berlin, just across the Spandauer Damm from the Charlottenburg Castle. A Moholy-Nagy show soon af-

They include architectural and scale models. designs graphics, paintings, sculpture, fabrics, and all the other things the Bauhaus masters and their disciples set about improving by functional but aesthetically pleasing design.

Aside from the more conventional fields of art, the Bauhaus people focused their attentions on furniture, industrial design, the stage, and just about anything which good design could, but too often didn't (and doesn't), make a pleasure to behold. In addition to far more important items, such as the Totaltheater which Grophus designed in 1927 for Erwin Piscator (never built, alas), the present show contains a number of smaller objects which might serve as symbolic of the whole Bauhaus Josef Hartwig, for example,

Political rightists persecuted the Bauhaus almost from the day of its founding. Drastic municipal cuts in its budget forced it to abandon Welmar in 1924 for more hospitable Dessau (today, like Weimar, in East Germany), where the Bauhaus designed by Gropius still stands, in somewhat altered form.

When the Nazis gained a maiority in Dessau in 1932, Mies organized private funds to move the Bauhaus into a former factory in Berlin. There, on July 20, 1933, under relentless pressure from the storm troopers and the Gestapo, with 32 students arrested and the building sealed, the Bauhaus "voluntarily" disbanded.

At least a dozen Bauhaus pioneers died in Nazi Germany's concentration camps. Those who survived made the Bauhaus a legend throughout the world, and its influence remains fresh and

Dramatic Scene: Plays and a Film

By Thomas Quion Curtiss T/IENNA (IHT) .-- Felicien Marceau's "Die Krone der Schönfung" (Crown of Creation) is having its world premiere in Vienns at the Theater in der Josefstadt. This is the house opened by Max Reinhardt as a showcase for Strindberg and which specializes in modern drama.

This time the Belgian author of the successful "L'Oeuf" and "La Bonne Soupe" has written a philosophical fantasy. It is basically a dialogue between a man and his conscience (represented by a woman) as he looks back over his life. He revises his self-satisfied estimate of himself as his reproving inner voice reminds him that past events were not quite as he likes to remember them. Flashbacks reveal what really happened, disturbing his protective cynicism.

It is reported that young theatergoers relish this play and there has been much head scratching in search of reasons. The script's viewpoint is one of middle age. Is it that youth regards all elders as callous frauds? Or is the secret the facile, amusing acting of Hans Hoit as the reminiscing herovillain and of Vilma Degicher as his conscience, interpretations that sweeten the bitter bite of the satire? In any case, a hit.

The Paris production of the play, scheduled for last season, was postponed when Marie Bell. who plans to appear in it at the Gymnase, broke both her legs.

Other Plays

Another popular French comedy in the repertory is "Four Rooms on a Garden" by Barillet and Gredy, and there is an adaptation of David Storey's "Home," which concerns two English gentlemen who have been confined to a mental institution.

In preparation at the Josefstadt are Anouilh's "Don't Wake James Saunders's dramatization of the novel "The Italian Girl" and revivals of Ibsen, Molière, Nestory, Raimund, Molnar and Schnitzler. One of the most important events of the near future will be the premiere of Arthur Miller's new play. "The Creation of the World, Adam and Eve and Other Businesses." Ernst Häusserman, the the-ater's director, was born in Vienna and trained as an actor in pre-Anschluss times. He fled the Hitler regime and returned as an officer in the U.S. Army, After directing a government radio-TV station, he was appointed manager of the Burgtheater which is to Austria what the

OPERA: Menotti's 'Consul' Triumphs in Italian Reviva

Gian Carlo Menotti's "The Consul" was first given in Italy, at La Scala some 20 years ago, the reception was stormy, marked by loud disapproval from the audience. Yesterday's cause célèbre all too easily becomes today's yawn, but last week's revival of "The Consul" in Florence—greeted with long applause and lond cheers from the capacity publicproved that, if Menotti's opera has gained acceptance over the past two decades, it has lost none of its theatrical efficacy.

Moving theater is not necessarily good theater. Menotti the librettist frequently lends a hand to Menotti the composer in tearjerking (especially in the scenes with the old mother and the sickly, doomed infant). Still "The Consul" works well, often on deeper and less sentimental levels.

Invention

Even the composer's most severe critics would have to admit that the character of the secretary is an original forceful invention: and Magda's great second act aria "To this we've come" is not just a show-stopping bravura piece, but also convincingly and profoundly

The Florence production was fortunate in its cast. The American mezzosoprano Joy Davidson, as the secretary, created a fully rounded character and same the part with greater musicality than some of its previous interpreters have brought to it. How to place your portfolio under investment management starting with as little as $5,000

If you have saved or acquired $5,000 to $50,000 in cash or securities, you naturally want to make your capital grow. Yet you may feel you are actually losing ground due to inflation and taxes, or perhaps to a lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, clients in 64 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management. a tested plan originally developed by a Boston family to manage its own common stock investments. The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000 - though, as in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 15-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. T.94.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

A lead-directing double mis-fired and helped the Aces, representing the United States, overwhelm Canada in the semifinal of the 4th World Bridge Olym-

Jim Jacoby, sitting South for the Aces, opened with one club, the strong bid in his system, the Orange Club based on methods originated by the Aces' Italian rivals in the final. The response of one heart was artificial, promising 6 high card points or more denying three controls, counting an ace as two controls and a king as one. East came in with two diamonds, and West crowded the auction with four diamonds when South made a gentle two-spade bid.

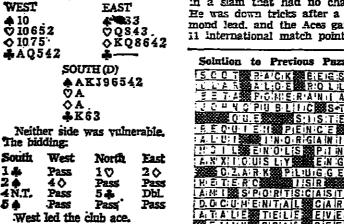

South tried Blackwood, hoping to find his partner with the club ace, but in so doing reached hazardous heights. As can be seen, five spades is headed for defeat. Barring some help from the defense, South must lose a trump trick and two clubs.

However, East doubled five clubs to ask his partner to lead a club. As this was likely to destroy his potential trump trick, it was a doubtful move. If he had maintained a discreet silence, West would have led a diamond and the contract would have failed. East perhaps hoped to obtain two ruffs if his partner led a club and held the diamond ace as a re-entry.

All would have been well for the defense if West had worked out that his partner's double of five clubs was likely to be based on a void. He could then have led a low ciub and the defense would have remained in control. But he led the ace, the first step to disaster.

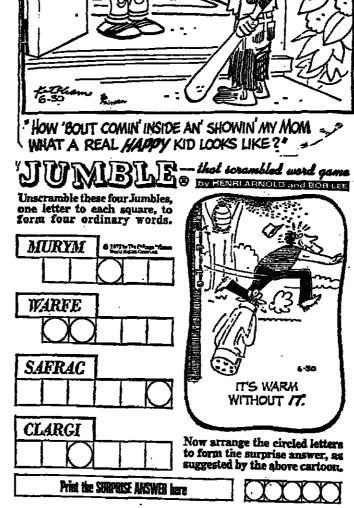

If East had stopped to realize that South must have the other three aces to justify his bidding, he might have saved the day by discarding the diamond eight, to deflect West from the obvious continuation of a club. Ruffing with the trump-trick was hardly likely to produce three tricks for

But East prosaically discarded the diamond two, and West naturally continued with a low chib. East ruffed, and two of South's losers suddenly merged into one. He had no difficulty in making the remaining tricks and his contract.

In the replay, East and West for the Aces succeeded in crowd-ing the auction and South landed in a slam that had no chance. He was down tricks after a diamond lead, and the Aces gained 11 international match points.

SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN

Father of New France

By Samuel Eliot Morison. Atlantic-Little, Brown, 299 Illustrated. $10.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haunt

IF you stop and think about it, arise as one reads along? B Samuel Eliot Morison seems it is worth emphasizing most unfashionable and out of date in his approach to the subject of his latest book, "Samuel Champlain: Father of New France." After all, without twisting the historical record too violently, one could easily describe Champlain as an imperialist (his life was devoted to developing France's colonial interests in the New World), an Indian-killer (he led several violent battles against the Iroquois) and a sexual monster of sorts (he apparently resisted all the approaches of seductive Indian maidens, did not marry until the age of 40 and then took as his wife a 12-year-old French girl whose virginity he contracted to respect for the first two years of their wedlock).

Just think of what the psycho-historians and revisionists would make of such a subject. Just think how Susan Sontag, with her view of the white race as the cancer of history, would treat him. Yet Samuel Eliot Morison is all admiration for Champlain, considers him one of the great men of the 17th-century age of exploration, has followed his footsteps through Canada and his navigations along the New England coast (or what Champlain called the coast of Norumbega) and has sworn by him as a virtual patron saint of sailors and navigators ever since he first cruised the Maine coast, using Cham-plain's charts, nearly 70 years ago. How very unfashionable!

But of course one doesn't stop and think such thoughts while reading Prof. Morison's latest volume on American history (his 46th, by my count, if one includes his collaborations and his monumental 15-volume "History of U.S. Naval Operations in World War II"). For one thing, Prof. Morison is either too wise or too identified with New England seafaring tradition (it depends on your point of view) to judge by contemporary standards what history was up to three-and-a-half centuries ago.

For another thing, he regards Champlain's treatment of the Indians as having been humane. enlightened and exemplary: by his account, Champlain waged war against the Iroquois only because he saw it in France's interest to side with the Montagnais-Huron-Algonkin alliance in the perpetual war that was the "northern savages' way of life." And for a third thing, Prof. Morison is simply to caught up in the adventure of it all to get he put into it. bogged down in psychological complexities.

Why even bother to raise such questions, then, if they do not Times.

it is worth emphasising getting away from them i of what makes Prof. Mo history such a pleasure to Escaping into a world of his prose where complex que are slashed away with a vigorous phrase, where suffuses the page and enth is nothing to be ashamed is all a little like taking a tion in a forgotten wildern untamed as the one Chan himself encountered when he set foot on these shores in year 1603. It is like getting from it all.

I mean this almost literally For in order to follow a part of Prof. Morison's t and especially to comprehen charmingly drawn maps charts by Champlain that ar cluded here—one must per fetch out an atlas (Roger F. can's and John P. As Prof. Morison po out in another context, i fascinating but finally idk speculate what difference would have made to history. at least the black flies and winter climate would not been so bad. There is more panache to Panatta Today he dumped little chips at Connors's feet, exploited the angles and for most of the long afternoon he pounded in his first serves so deep and so hard that too often Connors had no time to get his second hand on the racket while returning. And yet Connors won, diving around the court, foraging up to net and, perhaps with leprechauns on his shoulder, getting a handful of winning net cords that made the difference in the final set. The score to Connors was 6-3. 0-6, 6-4, 8-6.

Chris Evert, feeling her way to center court, took time to get pace and length on her punishing drives against Janet Newberry of La Jolla, Calif., but a few saucy drop shots gave her confidence and she won 8-3, 8-0.

Dick Stockton of Port Washington, N.X., was beaten by the sixth seed. Pierre Barthes of France in four sets, and Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., lost to Colin Dibley of Australia in a battle of the biggest serves at

Fischer Doesn't Move in Chess War of Nerves

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 29 (AP).-U.S. chess grandmaster Bobby Fischer canceled his scheduled airline flight last night from New York to here for his world championship competition against titlist Boris Spassky of Russia.

The competition is scheduled to start Sunday, and Larry Evans, a U.S. grandmaster who came on the flight, said, "I'm convinced he's carrying on a war of nerves. He's trying to upset Spassky. I don't know if it's working but I'm sure he's trying to bother him by creating uncertainty."

Fischer, who is Jewish, will not travel between sundown tomorrow and sundown Saturday. Informed sources involved in the organization of the competition said today that Pischer had given an ultimatum "two or three days ago" to the Icelandic Chess Federation that he wouldn't show up unless he got a guarantee of 30 percent of the gate receipts on top of the existing guarantee which gives the winner five-eighths of $125,000 in prize money,

Ramos Takes Split Decision From Carrasco in Title Bout

MADRID, June 29 (UPI).— Mando Ramos of Los Angeles knocked Pedro Carrasco to the canvas twice in the first two rounds and withstood a strong comeback by the Spaniard to win a split decision for the vacant World Boxing Council (WBC) lightweight title in a 15-round bout at the Madrid Sports Palace, Mexican referee Ray Solis gave the nod to Ramos, 144 to 142 points; judge Henry Alisbaru of the United States had Ramos ahead, 146 to 142, and judge Sanchez Villa of Spain scored the fight for Carrasco, 145 to 142.

For Ramos, 23, it was the 33d victory in 38 professional bouts. Carrasco, 28, suffered his third defeat in 95 fights. Ramos started fast, knocking for the bout.

It was the third title bout between the fighters in eight months, with Carrasco winning the first fight on a controversial disqualification in Madrid on Nov. 5 and Ramos outpointing the Spaniard in Los Angeles on

But both verdicts were voided, and the WBC ordered a rematch in each case.

Carrasco, relatively unruffled. pressed Ramos hard in the next rounds, landing numerous blows and puffing Ramos's left eyebrow with a right in the fifth round. But Ramos stopped Carrasco repeatedly with a cobra-like left and opened a cut on his left cheek in the 11th round. It was the only blood drawn in the fight. At the end, both fighters looked tired, but relatively unmarked. Ramos clearly dominated the final two rounds.

The crowd of 12,000 booed the verdict and threw hundreds of seat cushions at referee Solis and the judges. A ringside press photographer was injured by a beer bottle which hit him in the head. Never in Trouble'

'Peking Man' Hunt Spurred By a Reward

NEW YORK, June 29 (AP).-An American investment banker is offering a reward of $5,000 for the recovery of "Peking Man"the generic term for a collection of 40 skulls, 150 teeth and numerous bones that date man back 450,000 to two million years. Now Chicago investment banker Christopher C. Janus believes that he may have uncovered a ciue as to their wheresbouts. One of the people who contacted him, Herman Davis, 55, assistent to a heart specialist, said yesterday that he had had possession of the bones and other relics for a few days in 1941. Mr. Davis said that his then commanding officer and current superior Dr. William T. Foley, had been entrusted by the Chinese with taking Peking Man to the United States at the time of the Japanese invasion of the country in World War II.

But Mr. Davis believes that the Japanese "probably threw the bones away.

Meaningless

"When they came across the bones they probably threw them out, thinking they were bones of our American ancestor ... They wouldn't mean anything to

Mr. Davis, who lives in Colonia, N.J., said the bones may still be in the area of what was Camp Holcoomb near the coastal city of Hopeh Province.

Mr. Janus on a recent visit to China was told that the recovery of Peking Man "is terribly important to the Chinese at this time." In addition to Mr. Davis, two other people have contacted Mr. Janus saying that they have part of the collection.

A woman arranged to meet the banker on top of the Empire State Building in New York. She showed him a picture of a chest with Oriental characters written on it and which matched Mr. Davis's description of what the bones were carried in.

The woman said that her late husband had warned her not to part with the chest for less than Another man of Chinese origin met Mr. Janus in the Harvard Club and said he knew a man who had a similar chest and kept asking "Have you the money to pay for the box?"

'Our Cathedrals Are Rivers, Animals, Lakes and Plains'

By Marvine Howe

KINSHASA, Zaire (NYT). tors old cathedrals or ancient monuments, but we have no complexes. Our monuments, our cathedrals are our rivers, forests, insects, animals, lakes, volcances, mountains and plains."

This dedication to nature was made recently by Gen. Mobutu Sese Seko, president of Zaire and the African leader who has shown the most concern for the defense of the environment.

The protection of Zaire's national patrimony has become an integral part of President Mobutu's development program. He has announced plans to set aside as much as 15 percent of the country's territory as natural reserves. At present the Zaire authorities protect 18,-512,500 acres of land, or 3.17 percent of the country.

"We want there to exist a last human refuge, a natural nature in Zaīre, when the scientists will have transformed the world into an artificial environment." President Mobutu declared at last month's congress of the nation's single political party. "We don't want those degrading industries whose waste kills the fish of our rivers depriving man of the pleasure of fishing and drinking water."

Zairians proudly recall that 23 forestry guards died in their fight to protect nature during troubled times from 1960 to 1968, when rebels and mercenaries laid waste the national parks. A monument has been raised to these guards as "martyrs of the nation" in Virunga (formerly Albert) National Park.

Africanized

The National Institute for the Conservation of Nature recently published for the first time a map of Zaïre's national park reserves. The map is also of interest because the nomenclature has been completely Africanized-in accordance with the current decolonization campaign-except for Lake Albert and Lake Edouard, bordering on Uganda, The Belgian kings who ruled this country until independence in 1960 showed keen interest in preserving the national resources and created the Institute of National Parks of the Congo as early as 1925. Albert National Park was established the same year at Lake Edouard. Garamba National Park was set up in the northeast in 1938 and Upenba National Park the fol lowing year in the southeast.

President Mobutu added four national parks to the country in 1970; the vast Salonga in the west central virgin forest. Maiko and Kahuzi-Biega in the central east and Kundelungu in the southeast. Three additional reserves are under study, according to Mokwa Vanckang Izmisho, director of the National Institute for the Conservation of Nature, which replaced the old Belgian institute. These are to be located in the southwest between Boma and Matadi, east of Kinshasa in the area betwen Banbundu and Kenge and in the far north around Ango.

Tourism

Mr. Mokawa said in an interview that his institute had three basic aims: to protect the interral natural reserves without introducing new fauna as is done in Kenya, to favor scientific research in the reserves and to promote tourism.

Virunga National Park, which starts at Lake Kivu and extends past Lake Edouard is the best known of the reserves and well prepared for visitors. It offers wide variety of natural environment: the snow-capped heights of the Ruwenzori Mountains, active and extinct volcances, waterfalls and forestrimmed lakes. The park is rich in hippos-more than 22,000 plus lions, elephants, gorillas, buffalo and antelope.

Virunga is a good natural reserve because it is surrounded by lakes and mountains and the animais are forced to stay there, according to Albert Prisogine, who runs Zaire Safari Tours and who now uses the

Africanized name of Ngezayo Safari

"Posching has been virtually eliminated since several Rwandan poschers were executed," Mr. Prigogine said with ap-

10,000 Visitors

He said that there were only 100 visitors to Virunga in 1968 because of local unrest but that there were about 10,000 visitors last year after order was restored.

In the fishing village of Vitshumbi on Lake Edouard, elephants mix with the villagers, the pelicans and maribu storks. Pishing is permitted, and Lake Edouard is said to be the richest lake in central Africa in underwater fauna. The small park of Kahuzi-Biega near Bukayu was designed to protect the exceptional mountain vegetation and gorillas.

Garamba Park is one of the last places in the world where the white rhinoceros exists in its original habitat. This park was devastated during the rebellions and the rhinos dropped to 50 in 1963, but according to last year's count there were 250. There are also giraffes and huge colonies of elephants. Salonga and Malko parks have not yet been opened to the public. Scientists have shown interest in Salonga, one of the largest reserves of virgin Torest in the world, and are now studying the dwarf chimpanzes there. Maiko's equatorial forest is the home of gorillas, peacocks and the strange zebra-like
